

CALL FOR PAPERS

Current Research in Textile Archaeology along the Nile

Second Edition

Ancient Egypt has preserved a huge quantity of textiles, mainly made of linen, while other areas have preferred other materials, such as wool and cotton. The main topic of this workshop will be the investigation of resources and processing of fibres in textile production in Ancient Egypt and Sudan.

The aim of the conference is to bring together researchers in archaeology, but also philology and iconography to discuss issues related to textiles in Ancient Egypt and Sudan and their current state of art, from different perspectives.

The workshop will take place in Copenhagen in person on the 5-6 December 2022 and it will consist of two parts: the first day of the workshop will be dedicated to presentations, while the second day will propose hands-on experiments on flax (only for speakers).

Scholars interested are kindly requested to send the title of their contribution, a summary of 200-300 words, 3 keywords and their affiliation to chiara.spinazzi@gmail.com

Deadline for submissions: 1 September 2022

Please note that the first day of the workshop will also be streamed live via Zoom. More information will follow on <https://ctr.hum.ku.dk/>
